Torrance Art Instructor Takes Movies of Krushchev

Genuine warmth of the Russian people he met as well as a description of a stage-managed reception of Khrushchev in Poland, were depicted by a Torrance High School teacher who toured behind the Iron Curtain this summer.

Some of his experiences in Poland and Russia were related by Larry Macaray, an art instructor, who has been visiting Europe with a group of Whittier College graduates.

He said that his group almost was not permitted to enter Poland and that their train was held up at the border. Macaray said he took movies of Russia's Khrushchev when he recently came to Warsaw.

PROBLEM IN MOSCOW — Larry Macaray, Torrance High School art teacher, was a little stumped while he was at Moscow's Red Square on a tour behind the Iron Curtain. The Russian woman to whom he is speaking in the photo asked him street directions in Russian, and in the photo Macaray tries to explain that he neither speaks Russian nor knows his directions.

Describes Reception
"It is difficult to find out from the average person behind the Iron Curtain how he feels about his government, but one little incident at the parade in Warsaw made many things clear to me," the instructor wrote in a letter to the Torrance Press.

"As we waited, several cars loaded with small paper flags on sticks would stop and a man would jump out and thrust a Russian flag and a Polish flag into each person's hands."

"Many people that I saw would reject the Russian flag and accept the Polish flag, and if pressure were brought, they would immediately pass the Russian flag on to the next person and it went like a hot potato. After the parade I noticed that the ratio of flags thrown down on the street was about 10 Russian to one Polish."

Black Market
Macaray then continued his description of his experiences in Russia.

"After such a trying time in Warsaw, I was actually unprepared for Moscow. The hotel and food were wonderful and they treated us like royalty."

"Red Square was alive with young black-marketeers dealing in money and American clothing. Everyone wants American dollars, because if they want to leave Russia, rubles are worthless. The young teenagers all want American jazz records and American styled clothes. I can't say I blame them after seeing the quality of goods that are sold on the market at fantastically high prices."

Soccer Match
The Torrance teacher said he was quite impressed with the guard ceremony at the tomb of Lenin and Stalin, and the well-behaved crowd of 105,000 that attended a soccer match between Russia and Rumania. Macaray said he was deeply impressed by the Russian people who attended church services in one of the few churches used for devotions.

"The expression of communication and emotion on their faces was breathtaking to witness and certainly mere words are inadequate in expressing what we felt at that moment," he wrote.

Macaray is now touring the Scandinavian countries and will return here for school opening.
